

Robert was working on a line of code for his startup company when he felt hungry and decided to order some food.

He asked his boss if he could get his lunch break and he said he can, but he only gets an hour max.

He ordered his food for takeout at a local restaurant which seemed very packed when he arrived.

Furthermore, it has been over an hour and he still hasn't gotten any feedback on his food, and now he's starving.

But, he knows about an app called "Grubhub for students" that, which he thought might be able to help him.

He now uses the app multiple times a day, and he loves how useful it is.

